Recommended Readings:

Course Description and Objectives: This course involves a review and analysis of theories and research methods from social and behavioral sciences (e.g., psychology, sociology, anthropology, economics, etc.) as they relate to understanding and predicting the behavior of the various players in the marketplace. Students will learn how to interpret, evaluate, and apply behavioral research principles to marketing problems. After taking this course, you will understand consumer behavior from a variety of perspectives; develop the ability to apply the broad principles underlying human behavior in general and consumer behavior in particular in a variety of contexts and situations; better appreciate and understand the multiple roles played by marketing research, marketing strategy, and basic research on intra- and interpersonal processes in contemporary marketing practice; develop and enhance your analytical and presentation skills.

Preparation: Students should be prepared to discuss and answer questions about text, lecture and other assigned reading material. Active OSU E-mail Account Required (please have your OSU email forwarded to other accounts if you do not use OSU email). Class material and web assignments will be available via Carmen. Additional cases may be assigned.

Please complete your Carmen Profile, including a picture, by August 28th.

COURSE ORGANIZATION

Classes: Lecture/discussion format. Lectures and discussions are intended to reinforce text and other readings.

Exam: Two Exams (150 points each). Students are responsible for all reading material. Not all textbook and reading materials will be discussed in class. However, you are still responsible for the material. Feel free to ask about any textbook or reading materials at any time. Please complete assigned readings prior to class discussion. Exams will cover lecture material, book material, Carmen readings, and Carmen postings.

Papers (150 points): Each student can choose one of the three following options.

1. A research paper. Working with the professor, the student identifies an area of in-depth study. The paper will consist of a review of relevant academic and popular press materials on the topic. The paper will include your suggestions for additional research as well as the managerial implications of the research and theory on the topic. Approximately 15-20 page paper (including references, APA Style). 10 minute class presentation.

3. Analysis of Cross Cultural Consumer Behavior and marketing communications. Focus on advertising, product promotions, etc as they vary (or should vary) across cultures. Class presentation should include example marketing stimuli and links to theory and research from the textbook and/or other disciplines. 10 minute class presentation. Approximately 15-20 page paper (including references, APA Style).

All papers should use American Psychological Association format for references and in-text cites.
