Deven Sharma is executive vice president for Global Strategy at The McGraw-Hill Companies. He plays a key role in developing business strategies to advance McGraw-Hill's overall growth objectives and heighten the Corporation's market impact. In this position, Sharma works closely with The McGraw-Hill Companies' management team to strengthen strategy development capabilities and to identify and develop new global business opportunities. He is especially active in the development of new opportunities that span the corporation's major markets of education, financial services and information and media services.

Sharma joined The McGraw-Hill Companies in January 2002 from Booz-Allen & Hamilton, a global management consulting company, where he was a partner. During his 14 years with that firm, he led its U.S. marketing board and customer management initiatives. He provided guidance to companies on business strategy and globalization initiatives, as well as branding and sales management issues. Much of his experience includes work with global corporations in Latin America, Europe and part of Asia. Prior to Booz-Allen, Sharma worked with manufacturing companies, Dresser Industries and Anderson Strathclyde.

Sharma holds a bachelor’s degree from the Birla Institute of Technology in India, a master's degree from the University of Wisconsin and a doctoral degree in business management from the Fisher College of Business at The Ohio State University.

Sharma has authored three publications: The Truth About Customer Solutions, Customer Solutions—Pilots to Profits and Connecting the Demand Chain. He is a board member of The U.S.-China Business Council.
